Unlock The Secrets Of Cigar Room Interior Design

Imagine settling into a richly patinaed leather armchair, the sweet scent of cedar and a hint of fine tobacco mingle in the air while Chet Baker spins on the turntable. Creating your own cigar room — or any room with that timeless aesthetic — ushers luxurious escapism into your home.

We love it. And we're betting you will, too.

So, we've gathered tips from some leading interior design and cigar room experts to unlock the mystery of what goes into creating a space infused with delicious moodiness, seductive sophistication, and vintage allure. Let's get lost.

Breathe Easy: Elevating Air Quality

You may be thinking, “A cigar lounge? In this day and age?” Fair.

Our inspiration was Architectural Digest's profile of Kelly Ripa and Mark Consuelo's stunning cigar-inspired lounge/media room, a “...1970s vibe with deep blue lacquered walls, a fiber-optic cocktail table, and artwork hung salon-style. The pièce de résistance is a backlit bar nook, curtained in midnight-blue velvet with a whimsical painted cigarette motif overhead.”

Already, it sounds cool, right? Then Ripa sealed the deal, “By the way, we installed an amazing ventilation system. You'd never know anyone ever smoked in here.”

Of course, air quality is important for any room. Happily, there are loads of solutions, including, as we learned from Air Quality Engineering, “Smoke eaters...designed to target smoke and provide powerful odor control.” Yes, please.

For cigar lovers, that's exceptionally welcome news. As one cigar lounge owner told Cigar Aficionado's Garrett Rutledge, “When you're in there with six or seven, it's going to get pretty smoky.” Bottom line: ventilation is worth the investment.

In The Mood: Embrace The Power Of Colors

Designers have long leaned on the power of colors. Case in point, while loving on colors like ochre, deep aubergine, and dark blue-green in conversation with Architectural Digest, Surrounded by Color's Robin Heller and Jen Levyare shared, “We're not huge believers that colors go out of style—especially if they make you feel something special.”

Imagining a space like a cigar lounge for your home, what we're really talking about is ambience — feeling something special. And that ambience, designers agree, is deeply enhanced by darker, moodier palettes.

Old School: Love On Leather (And Faux Leather)

Cigar rooms usually have, um, cigars. Hence, there's nothing more quintessentially cigar-room chic than leather furniture. Because, beyond their visual appeal, leather and recycled leather are nearly impervious to liquids and odors.

As Cigars.com advises, “Avoid soft fabric furniture as it will hold onto cigar smoke. Instead, leather chairs “...add a cozy, rustic vibe to your lounge, especially once they begin to patina.”

Here at the largest online upholstery fabric store, we're passionate about personality. And patina — the wonderful character that emerges the more leather furniture's lived in and loved— is personality.

Studio Tre's Whitley Esteban and Ernesto Gloria shared their love of patina and quality fabrics with House Beautiful, “If patina is what we're after...let real materials be themselves, and let time do its thing. We look for materials and methods that are made to last.”

New School: Blending Styles To Reveal Yours

Today's cigar rooms balance vintage-inspiration with modern comforts. The “modern” is thanks to advances in technology like air filtration and performance fabrics like Crypton, offering virtually any hue or pattern and the durability you need.

And “vintage” isn't about untouchable, unlivable furnishings. For instance, mid-century modern design (the queen of less-is-more elegance) remains an essential style vibe because it's built to be lived in. As Paradowski Studio's Piotr Paradowski shared with Elle Decor, “While it started in the second half of the 20th century, it's still well-related to the modern times we live in.”

The designers at The Davani Group merge modern and classic styles, offering “an air of relaxation and sophistication every day and with every use.” Adding, versatile spaces like cigar rooms work “...in every style from vintage art deco to clean modern Scandinavian styles and everything in between. Blending styles, materials and colors together guarantee unique experiences that aren't repeatable.”

Get Lit: Lighting For Ambience

A cigar room calls for subtle lighting and strategically placed lamps to foster intimacy and mood.

The pros at Cigar Roller say, “Soft, warm lighting is ideal for creating a relaxing ambience. Consider installing adjustable lights, so you can control the brightness according to your mood or the time of day. A stylish table lamp can also be a great addition to your cigar lounge.”

But dimly lit isn't the only path to “lit” in your new lounge space.

The Cigar Public blog offers a different take, “...natural light is important for daytime use and showcasing your collection. Choose a room with ample windows to allow sunlight to stream in, or consider installing skylights or glass doors to brighten the space. Window treatments like curtains or blinds can be used to control light levels and create the desired atmosphere.”
